1. To qualify for authorship, each contributor must have fulfilled at least three distinct roles defined below, in a substantive and accountable manner. There is no hierarchical priority among the listed contributions.
2. Each author is responsible for reviewing and approving the final version of the article prior to submission.
3. Individuals whose contributions are limited to activities such as securing funding, general supervision, administrative assistance, or language and technical editing—without fulfilling at least three substantive roles—do not qualify for authorship and may instead be recognised in the “Acknowledgements” section.
4. These guidelines are aligned with the principles of the Council of Science Editors (CSE), the International Committee of Medical Journal Editors (ICMJE), and the Contributor Roles Taxonomy (CRediT).
